Women's voices on gender parity

Any female lawyer who juggles family and career will gain new respect for the early years of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, chronicled in the 2018 documentary RBG. One of nine women in a class of more than 500 at Harvard Law School in 1956, Ginsburg was the first female member of the Harvard Law Review. She was caregiver for a two-year-old daughter and her husband Marty, who was undergoing cancer treatment. Let that sink in for a moment: Harvard Law. Toddler. Husband with cancer.

Lawyers today rely on a formal support system that includes family leave and part-time work, and the career/family juggle is far easier than in Ginsburg's day. But the legal industry still struggles with a lack of female lawyers in senior partnership and law firm governance roles; the issues of retention and pay equity; and the paucity of female litigators who take the lead chair at trials.

The fight for gender parity is dear to many of the 114 women who grace the 2019 list of Notable Women in Law. Like Ginsburg, these attorneys juggle distinguished careers, family, exceptional civic activities—and are steely warriors against gender discrimination.

"Change must start at the top. To take a page from the Notorious RBG, advancement opportunities will expand for all female lawyers when managing partners and other management positions in law firms are filled by women," noted one of women on this year's list.

That comment was one of many insightful points made in response to a request Crain's made to this year's class: Anonymously identify one change the legal profession can make to expand advancement opportunities for female lawyers. Among their candid recommendations, these attorneys stress that it's all about the numbers.

"Even though my firm makes efforts towards diversity and inclusion, I am often the only female partner in discussions and in the office practice group," writes one lawyer. "We need to do better encouraging women to stay at Big Law by supporting their choices." Adds another: "Set parity goals and make law firm and practice leaders accountable for achieving them for mid-level and senior associates; partnership elevations; partner retention; partner compensation; and credit for contributions."

At Greenberg Traurig, Shareholder Barbara Kaplan calls her firm a meritocracy where 21% of executive committee members are female. "But it's not enough," said Kaplan. "There are still too few women." Kaplan believes more female attorneys will advance to partnership and leadership slots industrywide as "women help women expand opportunities for advancement. Some of it is business referrals, because women need to be able to bring in business."

The lawyers on this year's list are passionate about opening doors to career and client development opportunities. "Female attorneys need to be given the same opportunities as men. If that happens, then women will knock those opportunities out of the park," writes one honoree.

Another called for law firm clients to be change agents by ensuring women "are in the room where business is awarded." Writes a third honoree: "Educate men about the importance of sponsoring and mentoring women. They need to ask themselves 'when I go to a pitch, do I only bring people who look like me?' If the answer is yes, they need to change that."

Attorneys also called for better support of the career/family juggle. "Many new mothers struggle with continuing their careers and being home. A law firm that is more flexible with facetime and focuses on productivity and outcome will be more successful in retaining the talent they originally hired," writes one honoree. Law firms and corporate legal departments, adds another, "should seek ways to permit flexible hours and the ability to work from home so that working mothers can remain on partnership tracks or earn career advancement."

These sentiments are born from statistics that highlight the pressing need for improvement. Data still shows that fewer women than men become equity partners and get elected to law firm leadership positions.

In its 2018 Survey on the Retention and Promotion of Women in Law Firms, the National Association of Women Lawyers reported that females comprise 47% of associates but only 30% of non-equity partners and 20% of equity partners, figures that have barely budged in the past decade. As in previous NAWL surveys, women start off in essentially equal numbers as men at the entry level—with relatively equal compensation, billing rates, and hours worked as associates—but later fail to reach senior ranks in greater numbers.

In response, the American Bar Association in 2017 launched a two-year initiative to research possible contributing factors to the steady loss over time of experienced female lawyers at law firms. The ABA's goal is to make empirically based recommendations for policies that promote retention and eliminate the attrition gender gap.

Those are issues that already are being tackled by the women on our list, 39% of whom hold governance roles such as practice leader chair or co-chairs, a committee seat or an executive committee member. These leadership positions matter. Compensation and promotion decisions are made by lawyers who hold governance committee seats.

The NAWL report notes that women make up 25% of firm governance roles, 22% of firm-wide managing partners, 20% of office-level managing partners and 22% of practice group leaders. Those statistics represent progress, but they are not 50%. As NAWL says, "the numbers still lag behind the representation of women in the legal profession as a whole."

With so many of the female legal luminaries on this year's list pushing for change, those statistics are sure to improve. These women have strong ideas about how to fix what's broken. In the words of one of our Crain's honorees, "women must rise to the top and break through the cycle of underrepresentation to become law firm leaders, general counsels and CEOs to truly achieve parity."

The profiles in this report are drawn from submitted nomination materials as well as from Crain's New York Business editorial. No lawyer paid to be featured. The 2019 list of Notable Women in Law celebrates an exceptional pool of talented female attorneys in the New York City metropolitan area. Please join us in congratulating an outstanding 2019 class.

Head of antitrust and competition
NORTON ROSE
FULBRIGHT

Before joining
Norton Rose
Fulbright, Robin

Adelstein served as a key legal official for large-scale firms including health care giant Novartis and alcohol beverage leader Diageo. She brings this wealth of experience to her work with the firm, where she litigates complex commercial disputes, class actions and multi-jurisdictional cases before U.S. federal and state courts. Companies trust Adelstein to advise them on antitrust issues arising in mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures and trade association activities. Adelstein also shares her knowledge as a frequent speaker at summits and panel discussions focused on health care and life sciences.

TERRI ADLER

Managing partner
DUVAL &
STACHENFELD

At Duval & Stachenfeld, Terri Adler oversees one of the largest real estate practice groups in New York City. During a career that has spanned more than two decades, Adler has gained a range of expertise in the real estate field, with a particular focus on complex joint ventures and corporate transactions. Adler founded the women's initiative at Duval & Stachenfeld and is actively involved in mentoring and assisting young female attorneys both within and outside her firm. She regularly speaks on women's issues in the legal and real estate industries and is a member of WX New York Women Executives in Real Estate.

In 1886, New York State
admitted the first woman,
Kate Stoneman, to its

MERIAM AL-RASHID

Partner
DENTONS

As a member of Dentons' litigation and dispute resolution practice group, Meriam Al-Rashid focuses on public international law and investment, commercial arbitration and risk management. Her international practice has included arbitrations before the International Centre for Dispute Resolution, London Court of International Arbitration, United Nations Commission on International Trade Law and International Chamber of Commerce. Al-Rashid shares her experiences as an adjunct professor of law at Fordham Law School teaching investment arbitration. Her pro bono legal activities include work for Human Rights Watch regarding proposed rules on crimes against humanity and the Iraqi Refugee Assistance Project in their efforts to resettle refugees.

RENA ANDOH

Partner
SHEPPARD
MULLIN

Along with her role as a member of the business trials practice group, Rena Andoh counsels clients on practical and legal issues relating to forensic preservation and analysis of electronic devices. Her broad-ranging litigation practice has given her substantial trial and arbitration hearing experience, including acting as lead counsel in complex commercial matters. Her clients have included firms in the entertainment, financial, manufacturing, technology and pharmaceutical industries. Recently, Andoh was named vice-chair of Sheppard Mullin's firmwide diversity and inclusion committee, a group that gives attorneys of color a forum to address issues of interest within the firm and the broader legal community.

"If clients retain women as the lead attorney on matters, it will directly result in women attaining more power within law firms, which will, in turn, fundamentally alter the legal landscape on diversity."*

ANTONIA APPS

Partner
MILBANK TWEED
HADLEY &
MCCLOY

A former federal prosecutor and lauded trial attorney,

Antonia Apps represents financial institutions, corporations and executives in a range of regulatory enforcement proceedings, white-collar criminal investigations and complex commercial litigation. She also advises hedge funds on securities trading and compliance matters. Prior to joining Milbank in 2014, Apps spent more than seven years as an assistant U.S. attorney, where she led some of the government's highest-profile securities fraud and insider trading cases. Apps also teaches a course on white collar criminal law and procedure at Harvard Law School and is a frequent speaker and commentator on white collar and securities enforcement issues.

MICHELE ARBEENY

Partner
WINDELS
MARX LANE &
MITTENDORF

Michele Arbeeny concentrates her practice on real estate finance, municipal finance and trade finance transactions. Arbeeny maintains a successful track record of representing financial institutions and nonprofits in all aspects of secured and unsecured financing, including acquisition loans, construction loans and revolving and term loans. She also represents financial institutions and developers in affordable housing transactions. In 2017, Arbeeny spearheaded the formation of Windels Marx Women, a group of legal professionals who organize around business development, networking and mentoring opportunities. She was also the leading force behind the firm's establishment of a scholarship devoted to advancing diversity in law schools and the workplace.

NICOLE ARGENTIERI

Partner
O'MELVENY

A skilled litigator and former federal prosecutor, Nicole Argentieri advises corporations, board members and executives on internal investigations, criminal defense, regulatory compliance and related civil litigation. Since joining O'Melveny earlier this year, Argentieri has amassed a growing list of high-powered clients. During her decade-long tenure as an assistant U.S. attorney, Argentieri led and supervised complex investigations and prosecutions, including a civil rights case charging a Bureau of Prisons lieutenant with the repeated sexual assault of a female inmate under his supervision. She has also lectured at Columbia University Law School, where she co-taught two courses on federal litigation and federal criminal prosecutions.

SONIA BAIN

Partner
BRYAN CAVE

Corinne Ball has nearly four decades of experience in the fields of business finance and restructuring. At Jones Day, she co-leads the New York office's business restructuring and reorganization practice, along with the European distress investing and alternative capital initiatives. Ball worked extensively on the city of Detroit restructuring, which followed her leading a team of attorneys representing Chrysler in its successful Chapter 11 reorganization. Ball is also a force for change in her community. She was recognized with a Human Relations Award from the Anti-Defamation League for her commitment to fighting anti-Semitism, racism and all forms of bigotry.

BONNIE BARSAMIANPartner*
DRINKER BIDDLE
...

Bonnie Barsamian has spent nearly 30 years as a trusted adviser to public and private companies, boards of directors, C-suites and financial institutions in complex transactional and governance matters. Her experience ranges from securities offerings to cross-border mergers and acquisitions. A seasoned counselor on federal securities laws, Barsamian advises clients on SEC reporting matters, rule-making initiatives, compliance and best practices. In June 2016, her work was recognized by President Barack Obama, who nominated her to serve on the board of the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, an organization that provides limited coverage to investors on their brokerage accounts if their brokerage firm becomes insolvent.

“Clients need to push for diverse representation. If clients insisted on equality in representation and leadership in law firms, the entire profession would change nearly overnight.”*

LAURA BARZILAI*Partner*
...

Laura Barzilai puts her more than 30 years of industry experience to work as a transactional and tax controversy lawyer at Sidley Austin, where she co-leads the firm's global tax practice and is a member of the executive committee. Her clients include Fortune 100 companies, banks, insurance companies and private equity and sovereign wealth funds. Her practice is largely devoted to federal income tax matters, advising clients in the areas of domestic and cross-border mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures and restructurings. Barzilai is also a member and the previous New York chair of the firm's Committee on Retention and Promotion of Women.

LORI BAUER
Office managing principal
JACKSON LEWIS

She has tried a number of jury trials as lead counsel and has extensive appellate experience, including arguing before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Her work in the field has led to her recognition by a number of respected organizations, including The American Lawyer and The National Law Journal. She frequently speaks at conferences and seminars on patent law, including talks at the New Jersey Intellectual Property Association and the Sedona Conference.

LYNDA BENNETT
Partner
LOWENSTEIN SANDLER

With more than 20 years of commercial litigation experience, Lynda Bennett litigates, negotiates and resolves complicated disputes with insurers. As chair of the insurance recovery group, she obtains significant recoveries for clients in environmental, asbestos, product liability and professional liability cases. She is a trusted counsel to her clients with respect to contractual insurance requirements, new insurance products, innovative risk-management tools and insurance program assessment. Bennett regularly advises strategic acquirers and private equity funds regarding insurance coverage issues that arise in acquisition and investment transactions. Bennett also founded the Lowenstein Sandler's Women's Initiative, a grassroots program designed to empower the firm's women lawyers.

ANDREA BIERSTEIN
Shareholder
SIMMONS HANLY CONROY
...

Andrea Bierstein has more than three decades of legal experience and is recognized as one of the premier appellate brief-writers and oral advocates in the nation. In her position with the complex litigation department, she focuses her practice on pharmaceutical and commercial litigation, consumer protection class actions and environmental law. She has secured millions of dollars on behalf of her clients over the years, including a $32 million settlement for a medical manufacturer. She is also a former law professor and designed and taught an annual civil litigation clinic and second-year law courses at Western New England College Law School.

FRANCES BIVENS

Partner
DAVIS POLK &
WARDWELL

As part of Davis Polk's litigation department, Frances Bivens regularly acts as lead counsel in a broad range of high-stakes commercial litigation matters in courts around the country and arbitrations across the globe. She puts her electrical engineering degree to work by specializing in litigation involving complex technical issues. Bivens is also committed to pro bono work and recently collaborated with the Office of the Public Defender in the Eastern District of New York to address sexual assaults against female detainees. Additionally, she is a member of Brown University's Advisory Council on Diversity and the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law's Board of Directors.

KIMBERLY BROWN BLACKLOW

Partner
CLEARY
GOTTLIEB STEEN
& HAMILTON

Since joining Cleary Gottlieb in 1994, Kimberly Brown Blacklow has served her clients in real estate and other asset-based finance transactions, as well as structured finance and capital markets transactions in both the U.S. and abroad. She regularly represents both lenders and borrowers in intercreditor agreements, credit tenant lease financing and other types of financing transactions. She is also well-versed in matters involving real estate acquisitions and joint ventures. In addition to her regular practice, Blacklow has significant pro bono experience, including guiding the Lower Manhattan Cultural Council in establishing The Arts Center at Governors Island in New York City.

Hon. Sonia Sotomayor

in New York.[†]

ELISE BLOOM

Partner
PROSKAUER
ROSE

With a career spanning more than 30 years, Elise Bloom is an employment lawyer known for handling high-profile cases on behalf of some of the nation's most prominent companies. Over the course of her career, Bloom has represented more companies in class actions challenging interns, trainees and volunteers than any firm in the country, and her precedent-setting argument on behalf of Fox Searchlight Pictures helped determine the standard for evaluating the legality of unpaid internships. Outside of Proskauer, Bloom is a board member of the Women in Law Empowerment Forum, a platform that educates and provides networking opportunities for women in law.

SUSAN BODINE

Partner
COWAN DEBAETS
ABRAHAM &
SHEPPARD

Susan Bodine is the go-to representative of a diverse clientele in the motion picture, television and digital media industries as co-head of the firm's entertainment group. As part of her practice, she counsels those clients in all phases of development, finance, production and distribution of movies, television programs and new media properties. She is also committed to pro bono work and recently handled an asylum case on behalf of an African immigrant for the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, an organization serving refugees and other displaced persons around the world. She also provides pro bono services to entrepreneurs and artists through her involvement with the IFP Made in NY Media Center and Creative Capital.

“Offer flexibility for women to resume a ‘partnership track’ career path after having children, so that having and raising children does not mean women must sacrifice their career objectives.”*

LAUREN BOGLIVI

Partner
PROSKAUER
ROSE

Having spent her entire legal career at Proskauer, Lauren Boglivi has developed a successful transactional practice on behalf of companies, private equity sponsors and family offices. Her array of experience includes handling mergers and acquisitions, buyouts and related financings, joint ventures and growth and seed investment. Foreign private issuers and U.S. public companies rely on Boglivi to manage their SEC compliance matters. Outside of her cutting-edge legal work, Boglivi sits on the board of Women in Need, an organization that helps homeless women and children in New York City succeed on their own by providing them with housing, services and programs.

STEPHANIE BRESLOW

Partner
SCHULTE ROTH
& ZABEL

As co-head of the investment management group and a member of the executive committee and operating committee, Stephanie Breslow maintains a diverse practice that includes investment management and partnerships and securities. She also co-heads a team of cross-practice lawyers that advise private investment funds and other investors on the implications of sponsoring initial coin offerings, conducting transactions involving cryptocurrencies and managing and investing in funds that involve cryptocurrencies. Highly involved in the New York City community, Breslow is a member of the board of trustees of the Joyce Theater and a member of the Board of Visitors of Columbia Law School.

ERICA BUCKLEY

Partner
NIXON PEABODY

Erica Buckley leads the co-operatives and condominium practice at Nixon Peabody, where she oversees transactional matters and government investigations involving real estate securities. An expert on the Martin Act, a New York blue-sky law that governs real estate securities, Buckley's clients range from prominent New York City developers to startup nonprofits. Drawing on her experience as former chief of the Real Estate Finance Bureau, Buckley advises clients on meeting regulatory requirements while minimizing risk to their properties. Buckley is also credited with establishing the legal department at the Urban Homesteading Assistance Board, a nonprofit that helps create and support self-help housing.

SUSANNA BUERTEL

D. HARA PERKINS

Partner
GOULSTON & STORRS

In recent years, D. Hara Perkins has helped structure some of the most significant neighborhood-transforming real estate transactions in New York City, including Essex Crossing, a planned mixed-use development on the Lower East Side, and Cornell Tech's 12-acre campus on Roosevelt Island. Perkins has negotiated low-income housing tax credit transactions valued at more than $1 billion on behalf of her developer and investor clients. An expert in the fields of housing and economic development, Perkins, who co-chairs the firm's multifamily housing industry group, speaks regularly on the trends and changes that are affecting the real estate industry.

LISA RADETSKY

Partner
PHILLIPS NIZER

As co-chair of Phillips Nizer's real estate practice, Lisa Radetsky focuses on preparing offering plans for vacant and occupied residential and mixed-use properties. She works alongside government agencies to secure approval for those projects. An in-demand attorney whose cases typically last between three to five years, Radetsky regularly represents nonprofit organizations and owners of commercial buildings that seek to convert their buildings into condominiums. Radetsky has also served on the New York State Bar Associations' committee on cooperatives and condominiums and on the alumna advisory board for the reorganization of Gamma Phi Beta sorority at Columbia University, which had been dormant since 1911.

Female litigators find their voices

New efforts to give young women their day in court

Janice Mac Avoy, co-head of the real estate litigation practice at Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, recalls chatting with another senior female attorney about a case that she knew her firm would not win. Mac Avoy's colleague made an eye-opening suggestion—if the case was unwinnable, why not let a female associate tackle the oral arguments as a learning experience?

"I thought wow, why didn't I think of that?" said Mac Avoy. "We knew we would lose, so no one would blame her. It was a great experience for her, and it saved the client money to have the associate, not me, argue the case. Not every motion is the most important thing in the world."

More partners are giving female litigators the opportunity to shine in the courtroom. The impetus is a bombshell 2017 report published by the New York State Bar Association. "If Not Now, When?" is packed with data on the lack of female voices in both courtrooms and in alternative dispute resolutions.

Female attorneys in speaking roles account for just about a quarter of counsel who appear in state and federal courts in New York. They had 24.9% of lead counsel roles and 27.6% of additional counsel roles. But in complex commercial cases, the percentage of female lead counsel—31.6% in one-party cases—shrank to 26.4% in two-party cases and just 19.5% in cases with five or more litigants. "The more complex the case," reads the report, "the less likely that a woman appeared as lead counsel."

So what's to be done? Female lawyers must conduct depositions early on in their careers. They should participate in court instead of sitting at the counsel table while the senior partner argues the matter. When that happens, female litigators gain experience, and court proceedings are more efficient, said Nancy Kestenbaum, a Covington & Burling partner and former federal prosecutor.

"Instead of senior lawyers turning for answers to the female associate who took the deposition, the judge gets those answers efficiently, and it is an opportunity for younger lawyers to speak. It's a win-win," said Kestenbaum.

Senior litigators are coaching young women to overcome their fear of asking to take on a case or lead a deposition.

"Women need to be more vocal," said Una Dean, a Fried, Frank partner and former federal prosecutor. "They struggle with fear of failure: 'Can I do this?' The critical part is leaning in even when you have doubts you can do it, because that's what your male counterparts are doing."

The NYBA report makes specific recommendations that New York judges have taken to heart.

"Judges in the Southern District now ask if there isn't a woman on the litigation team, why not, and if there is, why isn't she speaking? That is really powerful," said Mac Avoy.

"Judges are saying 'I want to hear other voices,'" added Mary Beth Forshaw, a Simpson Thacher & Bartlett litigation partner. "The judiciary in New York is leading the charge, making sure women are taking the first or second chair. Everyone needs to stop and think, is there a woman on our roster?"

The path to success

Leadership skills get handed down to the next generation of female lawyers

In the legal profession, the gender gap is characterized by fewer women in top governance and practice leadership posts; less access to senior partners who influence client exposure; and the juggle between family and career that often falls more heavily on women. The 114 attorneys on the 2019 list of Notable Women in Law have responded with an arsenal of techniques to lessen that gap for younger women by developing their leadership, legal and business development skills.

"The more we see women in positions of power, the more we see this as a matter of course," said Ricki Roer, who sits on Wilson Elser's executive committee. "And as women move up the ranks of power," she added, "we can begin to address disparities" such as the gender pay gap.

Access to the law firm power structure, where the bulk of compensation and promotion decisions are made, is critical. Women who hold law firm leadership positions are committed to grooming female associates for entry-level spots.

"You have to develop leadership skills, and the only way to do so is if someone says, 'you should be on the finance committee to get those skills,'" said Mary Beth Forshaw, a Simpson Thacher & Bartlett partner in her seventh term on the firm's executive committee.

Younger women must be encouraged to run for these positions, adds Forshaw, who recalls how she put her name into the ring at a relatively early age. "There's a hesitancy, and that needs to change to 'heck, I can do this,'" she said. Propelled by such support, there now are two younger women on the executive committee.

Other skill-development tools are women's initiatives—formal networking groups that offer programs on career advancement and professional development—as well as informal women-led alternatives to the old boys network. Both can help female associates access high-visibility cases and relationships with key mentors. Research suggests, however, that while women's initiatives are influential, they are by no means equivalent to elevating more women to governance posts.

"Despite the now universal adoption of women's initiatives," according to a 2018 survey by the National Association of Women Lawyers, "there is little evidence that these initiatives have led to substantial increases in the representation of women at the highest levels of the law firm."

Still, serious mentoring goes on at women's initiatives. At Shearman & Sterling, the Women's Initiative for Success, Excellence and Retention, or WISER, associates learn to appreciate the business side of law. Getting a handle on P&L, overhead, compensation, and managing people are critical skills for leadership roles—and deepen a lawyer's knowledge of her clients' businesses, said Donna Parisi, the global head of Shearman & Sterling's finance business unit and a former member of the firm's executive committee.

"Women need to understand the business side of law and how that can drive value for clients," said Parisi.

Nina Rokat, founder and chair of the Women's Committee at Olshan Frome Wolosky, makes sure the initiative polishes business generation skills. A co-administrative partner at the firm, Rokat said she learned that lesson early in her career after joining organizations that nurtured female client relationships.

"It opened up my eyes: Guys do this all the time and refer work to each other," said Rocket.

The significance of female referral networks has skyrocketed in recent years. They develop a pipeline of talent that can be tapped to meet new benchmarks for gender diversity, such as a recent California law that sets minimum gender-based requirements for boards of directors.

The networks also help law firms respond to client pressure to enhance diversity among outside counsel.

"We expect our law firms to assign diverse teams to all CBS matters for which they have been engaged," said Naomi Waltman, CBS Corp.'s executive vice president and associate general counsel, litigation. "To periodically assess compliance, we track the time spent by diverse lawyers on our matters. We also expect the diverse team members to play a meaningful role in the particular CBS matter."

Female referral networks essentially create databases of qualified women. "It's so important to have that old girl network so that we are advocating for each other," said Lori Lesser, a partner at Simpson Thacher & Bartlett.

New "old girl networks" have emerged in specific practice areas where female attorneys have an edge over the traditional cluster of older white men. That includes cybersecurity, where women like Lesser, who co-chairs Simpson Thacher's privacy and cybersecurity practice, entered a tech area that wasn't dominated by older men in the early 1990s. For a younger generation that grew up around technology, it was a legal arena where female associates could punch above their weight. "You didn't have an entrenched set of experts. Everyone had an equal playing field," Lesser recalled.

Privacy law is also a hot area with less competition from more senior attorneys. "It's been a great opportunity for younger lawyers," said Jessica Lee, a Loeb & Loeb partner who focuses on privacy and intellectual property issues. "It helps that they can understand how the tech works, because they grew up with AI, blockchain and VR."

Lee recalls a recent panel on blockchain and virtual reality populated entirely by female attorneys. "What a great opportunity for women," said Lee. "The old boy network hasn't had time to creep in."

Women helping women is key to mentorship in the wake of the #MeToo movement. There is talk of male attorneys who refuse to be alone in a room with female associates. Given the volume of men who control high-profile assignments and client interactions, such hesitancy threatens successful mentorships.

Conversely, sexual misconduct investigations have become a key practice area for female employment lawyers and former prosecutors.

"Many women are involved because of the sensitivity around these investigations," said Una Dean, a former federal prosecutor and partner at Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson.

CBS's board asked ex-prosecutor Nancy Kestenbaum of Covington & Burling to co-lead an independent investigation into sexual misconduct allegations against former Chairman and Chief Executive Leslie Moonves. She had led previous investigations involving such institutions as Choate Rosemary Hall and the Brearley School. The #MeToo movement, said Kestenbaum, "definitely has had an impact on my practice. There's no doubt there's been an uptick," as more companies grapple with allegations.

Women in particular are interested in the practice area. "I have no trouble staffing these cases," added Kestenbaum. "They are interesting, and they have a social impact." ■

"The more we see women in positions of power, the more we see this as a matter of course. And as women move up the ranks of power we can begin to address disparities."
